

Recruitment of 4 guest professors for the spring semester 2025

Each year, ENSA Normandie recruits 4 invited professors to conduct architectural, urban or landscape design studios during the last semester of the bachelor's degree program. These invited professors provide 120 hours of supervision for a group of twenty students, and also give during the semester a Masterclass lecture open to all the students of the architecture school.

Profile and purpose

Candidates must have a strong professional or academic background in architectural, urban and/or landscape design. They are invited to make a proposal for an innovative and exploratory studio that would stand out from the existing bachelor degree curriculum. In this context, the aim is to work with students on design methods and issues which aren't usually addressed within the school of architecture. It is planned that at least one of the four studios will be taught in English.

Conditions

Candidates are required to provide evidence of professional activity in architecture and/or teaching or research duties in a higher education research establishment, either in France, Europe or abroad.

They must also be qualified architects, urban planners or landscape architects.
