I/ Présentation : ENSA Normandie

a) History and Description

→ General Information

ENSA Normandie is a former factory built by Lucien Fromage between 1875 and 1880. In 1904, it was transformed into the first regional school of architecture in Rouen. The building was rehabilitated by two architects, Patrice Mottini and Pierre Dufflo.

Although designed as a school, it retains the identity of the original factory, making it uniquely charming and easily recognizable. You can still imagine its past—with the external chimney, the building's shape, high ceilings, classrooms, and windows.

Over the years, it earned the nickname "Fromage Factory" (literally "cheese factory" in English), despite originally being a textile factory.

Today, the present has replaced the past. You can see students, professors, and administrative staff moving through the school to attend classes or work.

The school covers 5,200 m² and welcomes approximately 700 students each year. In front of the main building, there is a 2.5-hectare park where you can relax and eat if you don't have class and the weather permits, giving the school a peaceful atmosphere.
